manufactures, which from their great superiority have become so universally celebrated, are obtainable from every respectable Provision Dealer in all parts of the world. Purchasers should insist upon having C. & B.'s genuine articles when they ask for them, as it is not unusual for unscrupulous dealers to substitute inferior preparations.

C. & B. invite special attention to the following the quality of which is of the highest standard attainable.

PICKLES prepared in pure malt vinegar.

BOTTLED FRUITS for Tarts, Puddings, &c.

JAMS AND JELLIES, Marmalade, Fruits in Syrup, Crystalized Fruits. Prepared Calf's-feet and other table Jellies; Vanilla and other Creams.

PURE MUSHROOM CATSUP. Essence of Anchovies, Harvey's, Reading, Soho, Royal Table, and other choice Sauces. Essence of Coffee. Flavouring Essences. White Wine Vinegar. Durham Mustard.

SALAD OIL, the finest imported.

POTTED MEATS, Anchovy Paste, Bloater Paste. Potted Preserved Hams, Cheese, Bacon, &c. Oxford and Bologna Sausages. Yorkshire Game Pâtés, Yorkshire Pork Pâtés. Mackerel in Sauce, Kippered Herrings, Pickled Salmon in Bottles, Fried Eels, Herrings a la Sardines. Blackwall Whitebait, Fresh Oysters, Asparagus, and a great variety of other table requisites and delicacies, particulars of which will be found in their detailed lists.

C. & B. are Special Agents for LEA & PERRINS' WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE PHILIPPE & CANAUD'S SARDINES, SOYER'S SAUCES, RELISH AND AROMATIC MUSTARD, CARSTAIRS' SIR ROBERT PEEL'S SAUCE, GRIMWADE'S DESSICCATED MILK, and for MASSON'S FRENCH CHOCOLATE.

To guard against frauds, consumers of C. & B.'s Preparations should purchase only from those dealers on whom they can fully rely; and should be particular to have all bottles and jars destroyed when empty, and the labels defaced. Every article sent from the Manufactory, bears on its label the address, HOMŒOPATHIC Practitioners, and the Medical Profession generally, recommend Cocoa as being the most healthful of all beverages. When the doctrine of Homœopathy was first introduced into this country, there were to be obtained no preparations of Cocoa either attractive to the taste or acceptable to the stomach; the nut was either supplied in its crude state, or so unskilfully manufactured as to obtain little notice.

J. EPPS, of London, Homœopathic chemist, was induced in the year 1839, to turn his attention to this subject, and at length succeeded, with the assistance of elaborate machinery, in being the first to produce an article pure in its composition, and so refined by the perfect trituration it receives in the process it passes through, as to be acceptable to the delicate stomach, and a most desirable breakfast beverage. For General use

EPPS'S COCOA

Is distinguished as being
INVIGORATING, GRATEFUL, and possessing a most
DELICIOUS AROMA;
And to these qualities it is indebted for the adoption it now obtains as a BREAKFAST BEVERAGE.

Three teaspoonfuls of the Powder in a breakfast cup, filled up with boiling milk or water, stirring meanwhile. Sold in tin lined ¼-lb., ½-lb., and 1-lb. packets.

Each packet is labelled thus:—"J. Epps, Homœopathic Chemist, 112, Great Russell Street; 170, Piccadilly; and 48, Threadneedle Street. Manufactory—Epps's Steam Cocoa Mills, Euston Road, London.

IMPARTIAL, NOT NEUTRAL.

SHANGHAI, SATURDAY, JANUARY 30 1864

THE frequency of crime in the settlements during the past three months, and the increasing number of important civil cases which come before the Consular Courts for trial, demonstrate more strongly than it has ever before been brought home to the residents, the urgent necessity which exists for some form of better government for Shanghai. The number of different nationalities who each have a greater or less claim to a voice in any such government, renders the question one of such extreme difficulty that we are not surprised at the Treaty powers and their Representatives deferring its consideration so long as it can possibly be avoided. It is in fact to the latter that we must look for the first step in the matter, whenever that may be taken: for until they urge it on the attention of their respective governments, the latter will not, of course, consider it of the urgent necessity it really is. Administrative element there is none, and the executive exists merely by a kind of consent among all parties concerned. Were this mutual understanding interrupted by any mischance, and did each Consul choose strictly to encircle himself and his nationals within their rights, the whole fabric must be upset. The British minister has laid down the law that the words sanctity of the British concession have no meaning, and the French and American representatives have endorsed his dictum, by also conveying to the Chinese government their assent to the principle that the concessions are emphatically its own territory, and that therefore it has a right to tax its own subjects thereon residing. The same privilege must be extended, although it would never be allowed in practice, to interference with the Chinese residents in a much more extended form. While, on the other hand, if the English concession be purely Chinese territory, an English policeman can have no legal right to arrest a foreigner of any nation making a disturbance in the public thoroughfares unless by the consent of his Consul. The same argument must apply equally to the other settlements, and it is for this reason we say that the whole executive fabric which has been built up—though marvellously efficient under such anomalous circumstances—is without any firm foundation. A discussion of the numerous questions which would have to be considered, and of the numerous difficulties which surround each, would require far more time that can be spared for a single article. Still less do we intend to suggest any solution, as it would be certain at once to call up a host of objections. We only wish to point out the urgent necessity for action of some sort, whether originating with the ministers, or in the community forcing it on their attention. In the meantime, a number of foreigners, of almost every nation under heaven, are crowded together in the settlement without other lawful superior than their Consuls, who are utterly powerless to interfere with them, inasmuch as they have no means at their disposal. The Municipal Council has those means, but has no absolute and clearly ascertained right to exercise them, beyond the tacit permission of Consuls, who if our view is right, can objects to their nationals being interfered with by any other than Chinese officials at any moment. The latter, of course, posses the right of arresting a foreign evil-doer on "their own territory," and of handing him over to his Consul for punishment. Under the present state of affairs, the monthly meeting of Consuls which has been decided on is the best arrangement that could possibly be made, and will probably be able to perform many of the minor duties of a government in the interim. But it is at any moment liable to disruption, and can only be relied on so far as it is always possible to calculate on the careful avoidance of disagreement and waiving petty questions of national right, by the gentlemen who compose the consular body. The most glaring crimes are now being perpetrated, both by Chinese and foreigners. Burglary has literally become a mania, and cases of the most outrageous nature are being perpetrated at the rate of two or three a week, without seeming hope of detection. Assaults by rowdies, both on foreigners and Chinese, are by no means uncommon, and the victim, so far from expecting the discovery and punishment of his assailant, congratulates him-self if he escapes without loss of property or serious injury to person. The impunity which thus appears so generally to attend the higher class of crime, under our present no-government, proves its utter incompetence to deal with a growing evil; while the importance and number of civil cases which are pressed on the attention of the three principal foreign Consuls, shew clearly the necessity for some fresh arrangement for disposing of that class of business. In the English consulate, especially, the quantity of judicial business is sufficient to afford average occupation to one man, whereas H. B. M. Consul is expected to dispose of it all in addition to his multifarious other duties.

Summary of the Week.

THE weather during the past week has been intensely cold, high winds with occasional falls of snow reminding us that we are now in the very middle of our Shanghai winter. We cannot but contrast the appearance of the settlements at present with the melancholy spectacle they offered during the winter of 1861-62. Then thousands of dying wretches thronged the streets, and lay down at night with the certainty of death before the morning. Now, however, the eye meets few objects of horror, and from the fact that suffering does not obtrude itself on our notice we are sufficiently ready to congratulate ourselves upon its non existence

The events of the week may be very briefly summaried. The English mail of 26th November arrived on Wednesday, having been detained by the breaking down of the Bengal in the Red Sea. The intelligence brought is of but little moment. Sir John Lawrance has been appointed governor general of India. It is extremely improbable that a European congress will take place. The "Great Eastern" company's affairs are to be wound up under an order by the Master of the Rolls. The Confederates have been successful. Burnside was shut up in Knoxville, and was said to have been superseded. Such are the principal items of intelligence.

Within the settlement, we have had to record but few events of general interest. Crime unfortunately seems to be steadily on the increase. We have been informed of the following outrages lately committed in our very midst. Early in the evening of the 22nd inst., a number of Cantonese entered the shop of an unfortunate tailor, and succeeded in carrying off a large quantity of furs, wearing apparel &c., &c., to the value of about six hundred dollars. Again on Wednesday evening last five foreigners, masked, broke into a small cash shop in Barrier Road, and in the calmest and most collected manner proceeded to rifle the boxes which stood round the room. Although this burglary was effected at half past seven in the evening no alarm was given, and the fellows made off in safety with dollars, sycee, gold and cash to the amount of about two hundred and seventy dollars. At half past six on Thursday evening one of the most thickly populated parts of the settlement was the scene of an outrage. The shop of a poor fellow who lives in Market Lane, a small street running from Church street to Barrier Road, was entered by a gang of Cantonese armed with knives, who searched the house, seizing everything of value contained in it, and getting away safely with booty amounting to about three hundred dollars. If we add to this list, an attack made by three foreigners on a gentleman returning to the settlement at about 12 o'clock one night last week, we shall arrive at the conclusion that Shanghai as a place of residence is day by day gaining nothing in desirability.

It would seem that the amusement of the Shanghai residents during the dreary winter evenings is to be well provided for. Mr. Faylor, who has had a highly successful run in Hongkong, has brought his company to Shanghai, and has engaged a large and commodious room for his entertainments. The Lady of Lyons is the piece announced for the opening night. It will be seen, therefore, that a superior description of dramatic performance is promised.

From the front we have received information to the effect that Kia shing has tendered its allegiance, but that the Ping Wang has refused to accept Ching's guarantee for his safety, and will not come over unless a civil mandarin named Sieh pledges him-self for the safety of the garrison. It is said that Sieh has been sent to enquire into the matter.

We have received the following account of the late Imperialist defeat. It would seem that the men belonging to three stockades midway between Tanyang and Chang-chow, came over to the Imperialists, and recommended that the post they had just vacated should be occupied by the mandarin troops. Accordingly Liu-ta-jên, an old Rebel Commander, sent up a large body of troops, who seized three more stockades, utterly regardless of the fact that they were in the centre of the enemy's country, with Tanyang in their rear, and separated from Changchow by a distance of forty five li. They were soon surrounded, and it was not until after three heavy repulses that Liu, Ko, and Chang contrived to relieve the garrison. The position was vacated at last, and no attempt to reoccupy it has been made by the Imperialists. News arrived in the settlement to-day that the Firefly had been seized by the Imperial troops near Chang-chow-fu, on the 22nd instant. It is said that after her recovery she was blown up by the mandarin Ko-ta-jên, but as to this no accurate reports have been received. As to the capture, however, there is no doubt.

FROM JAPAN our news is perfectly unimportant. Another fire had occurred at Yokohama, and the difficulties thrown by the government in the way of trade are still keenly felt.

IN RE
CHIMNEY POTS v. SIGN BOARDS.

IN the absence of material for serious discussion, we have called on our light litterateur for an effort of his eccentric genius. He has sent us the following, which "with all its imperfections upon its head," we lay before our readers.

THE stern dictates of Fashion have formed a theme for the moralists of all ages. That tyranny which imposes certain forms of dress, to the exclusion of all others, and insists on certain acts, unimportant in themselves, being taken as tests by which the fitness of an individual for introduction into civilised society may be ascertained, has appeared so unreasonable as to call forth the denunciations both of poets and philosophers. Thus Shakspeare, who, by the way, was no doubt himself finical to a degree in that finical age, exclaims indignantly:—

Where doth the world thrust forth a vanity,
(So it be new, there's no respect how vile.)
That is not quickly buzzed into the ears?

So far as the requirements of Fashion in the matter of dress go, the sterner sex may congratulate themselves that all over the civilised world, and more particularly in Shanghai, they are tolerably free from the trammels which surround "the ladies of creation." The decrees laid down with Medo-Persian rigor in the pages of La Follet, touch not on coats and hats—they apply solely to bonnets, dresses, mantillas, et hoc genus omne. Provided each evening sees us arrayed in a decorous black suit, faintly relieved by a white tie, convention smiles benignly on our dress, and permits us to follow the bent of our own (good or bad) taste in the costume of the day. Indeed this nightly transformation of oneself into the semblance of a waiter has hitherto been about the only homage paid by us to the claims of fashion in the far East. We dare not enter on the considerations of ladies' attire. Its mysteries, carefully concealed from the eyes of the uninitiated, are known but to milliners and lady's maids. When, in process of time, a "Ladies' Magazine" shall be established in Shanghai, we may hope to obtain occasional glimpses behind the scenes, and to be entrusted with some few of the principles which rule the variations in female adornment. Till then we must admire wonder and wait.

We have said that hitherto the assumption of evening dress was about the only sacrifice to convention in the matter of dress made by gentlemen in Shanghai. Now, however, we every day see a more and more homelike appearance stealing over the settlements, and amongst the elements of that resemblance to home we must certainly register the advent of "chimney-pot hats." Who does not remember the thrill of delight with which he first assumed that ugliest of ugly contrivances for sheltering the head, the sense of emancipation from boyhood, and from the trials, troubles and petty annoyances inseparable from caps and short jackets? The sensation is somewhat of the same character was doubtless experienced by the Roman youth when, accompanied by crowds of admiring friends, he was at the age of seventeen, carried into the forum, there divested of the Prætexta, and attired in the manly gown. We dessl allow that young gentleman igures in one of the satires of s. to announce the feelings of w candidate for the honors of ool.

first my childish robe resigned its charge, ft me unconfined to live at large;
now my golden Bulla (hung on thigh, nschold gods) declared me past a boy,
ty white plaits proclaimed my liberty;
with my wild companions I could roll is an overdrawn picture of what a regulated English youth sketches mself, when he is invested with the crowned hat, but it is sufficiently to give an idea of the thoughts h pass through his brain. But as arthly pleasures inevitably pall at the hat in process of time becomes ed upon as a badge of servitude, and ccordingly, whenever practicable, orded in favor of the Glengarry bon- rakish looking "Etonian." It is, efore, a most valid proof of our ving civilisation and refinement that ie present moment many tall hats to be seen in the streets of Shanghai , in other words, many men are found nanimous enough to sacrifice comfort ie requirements of fashion. It would be fair to the much abused hats to all mention of their convenience. s many a workman, when wending his ay way to the scene of his labors, es himself the trouble of carrying a ket, by putting his frugal dinner in hat. Many parliamentary orators, well as imperfectly "coached" uni- sity students, carry an amount of in- mation in their hats which it would impossible to get into their heads. reover, with us as with the Chinese, hat is a sign of dignity and importance. The parson of a parish or the lage doctor would carry little influence d he persistently appear in a wide- cake. Indeed the horror and disgust pressed by one of the Roman Em- rors when he beheld a crowd of citi- ns attired in short black habits could ot compare with the sensation which ould be caused were the attendants at public meeting in England to appear ithout the recognised badge of pro- riety.

In the interests of those who have lected to wear tall hats (and no doubt a few months we shall all wear them) re feel compelled to draw the attention of the Municipal Council to one pecu- liarity which especially characterises this ead dress. We mean its liability to be rushed, or, in technical language, blocked." For the comfort and con- enience of our pioneers of refinement n dress, we would therefore suggest hat the Inspector of Nuisances be de- puted to remove all sign-boards hanging over the pathways at a distance of less than seven feet from the ground. Unless this be done, any one invested with the hat of the period, who may walk on the pathway on the East side of Honan road, for example, will be forced, no matter how wet the day may be, to step into the middle of the street in order to avoid the series of boards hanging direct- ly over the footway, at a height of little more than six feet. The same may be said of many other parts of the settlement, and in all seriousness, the objectionable boards ought to be removed. The Mu- nicipal Council, who have already effect- ed so many improvements, will not, we are convinced, hesitate to attempt this, which, as will readily be seen, is essential to the comfort of everyone who wears a HAT.

PEKING.

Our countrymen at Peking have vindi- cated their claims to the English name by initiating Races in the capital. We publish below an account of the proceed- ings kindly sent to us by an occasional Correspondent. The weather continues intensely cold. The relations existing between the foreign ministers and the Chinese authorities remain upon the most friendly footing. We understand that the local militia in the province of Chih-li has been transferred to the com- mand of the provincial magistrates, and no longer remains in the hands of pri- vate individuals:—

PEKING RACES.

The first Amateur Races which have ever taken place at Peking were held on Thurs- day the 17th December last, at the Anting plain to the Northward of the City. They were got up by the Student-Interpreters of H. B. M's Legation and of the Imperial Chinese Maritime Customs, and consisted of pony races for various distances varying from half a mile to two hundred yards. A dense crowd of Chinese, Mongolians and Thibetans soon assembled near the winning post, and appeared to derive unlimited satisfaction from the riding and speed of the Ponies, and to enter heartily into the spirit of the race.

The course was attended by the Ministers of the different foreign legations at Peking, and the gentlemen of their suites.

As a guarantee that the want of liberal feeling usually attributed to the Missionary body, has no place among the learned and hardworking gentlemen who have chosen Peking as their field of labour, we may men- tion that we observed at least one reverend gentleman on the course lending his coun- tenance to this thoroughly English amuse- ment.

The races were as under—

I. Distance half a mile. Mr. Hobson's "Rev. Mr. Mitchell," Mr. Brett's "D. I. O."

1. Rev. Mr. Mitchell. 2. "D. I. O."

II. Distance quarter of a mile. Mr. Den- nys' "Pistol," Mr. Solbe's "Excommuni- cated."

1 "Excommunicated," 2 "Pistol," who when close upon the winning post and two good lengths in front, lost the race by bolting out- side the course.

III. Distance quarter of a mile. Mr. Allen's Gulf Arab "Giles Scroggins," Mr. Bismarck's Western Mongolian pony "Iron- sides."

1 "Ironsides,"

IV. Distance 200 yards. Mr. Dennys' "Pistol," Mr. Brett's "D. I. O.," "Pistol," 10 yards start.

1 "Pistol."

V. Distance quarter of a mile. Mr. Mur- ray's "Devil," Mr. Walker's "Revolver,' Mr. Dennys' "Slowcoach."

1 "Devil," 2 "Slowcoach."

VI. Handicap.—Distance half a mile. Mr. Dennys' "Pistol," Mr. Dennys' "Slowcoach," Mr. Bismarck's "Ironsides," Mr. Brett's "D. I. O," Mr. Hobson's "My Grief," Mr. Murray's "Devil," Mr. Hobson's "Rev. Mr. Mitchell," Mr. Selbe's "Excommuni- cated."

1 "My Grief," 2 "The Devil," 3 "Rev. Mr. Mitchell."

Lieut. Walker of the 99th Regt. acted as Starter, F. R. St. John Esq., as Judge, and J. McL. Brown Esq., as Clerk of the course; The best thanks of all present were unani- mously accorded to these gentlemen for the highly satisfactory way in which they dis- charged the duties of their respective offices.

PASSAGES OF TEA SHIPS.

WE have been given to understand that the statement of the passages made by the Tea ships during last season, published in the North-China Herald of the 2nd January, is not absolutely correct.

Allowing one day for the passage from the anchorage to Woosung, and taking the dates of arrivals at Gravesend from the Times, the passages of the first ships were as follows:—

Sailed.	Ship's Name.	Arrived.	No. of days.

THE YANG-TZE-KIANG AND THE NEW TREATY PORTS

To the Editor of The Times.

SIR,—On the morning of the 11th February, 1861, the naval expedition under command of Vice-Admiral Sir James Hope left the Woosung River for the purpose of exploring the upper waters of the Yang-tse-kiang, and of opening in- tercourse with the trading ports on its banks. Nearly three years have elapsed since the suc- cessful results of this expedition have been pub- lished to the world, and since that time many have been the evidences of the vast resources which opening the interior of China has present- ed to the commerce of western nations.

From observations made during a recent visit to Hankow with a thousand ton ship, I am ena- bled to testify to some of the difficulties of the navigation during our progress up in ballast and down full of tea, drawing 19ft. 6in. The first and great difficulty is the Lang-shan crossing, about five miles above Woosung; at this part of the river there are numerous sandbanks, partly covered at high water, and the channel between them is rather intricate; but it is well buoyed, and there being a light ship as well makes it comparatively easy, the best water on it coming down in July was half five, and, in fact, the danger was less than getting from Woosung to sea. From the Lang-shan to Chin-kiang the navigation is easy, the river contracts gradually, the channel deepens, but the current increases in strength. At Silver Island I had a pilot on board, and the imminent risk of being capsized, to show our river pass—a formality instituted by the author- ities and causing considerable detention; the tide at this place runs so strong that a six-oared gig could only just stem it, and Her Majesty's Con- sul in charge was lately capsized in a man-of- war's cutter. These dangers might be mitigated by the removal of the Consulate and Custom- house to Chin-kiang, or temporarily to a floating hulk, of which there are several in the anchorage. Chin-kiang is a fine city, but present a very dilapidated appearance, having been formerly held by the rebels. The Grand Canal is here intercepted by the Yang-tse, and several tug steamers are employed in towing the deeply laden salt junks past the rebel lines at Nankin. There is one serious drawback, and that is the anchorage. Vessels lying at that part, or call- ing, must all anchor on the opposite shore to the British concession, that being the only decent anchorage in it. The adjacent banks are low and marshy, and unsuited for European residen- ces; but on the city side are several pretty sites for bungalows. The current from here up runs with great rapidity, and the numerous steamers now constantly passing on the river render the practice of running all night extremely danger- ous. The loss which would result in event of collision, whether sustained by assurer or insur- ed, would be heavy, their cargoes valuing at times £50,000.

The upper passage of the river above Chin- kiang is well-known to the experienced pilots now on the river, and there is good anchorage to be had in any part of it, unit reaching Kew- kiang, where a goodly array of foreign residen- ces have sprung up, and but for the ever-recur- ring and disgraceful atrocities of the "braves" it would be a pleasant place of residence. A range of mountains two thousand feet high at the back, forms a pleasing contrast to the flat un- interesting plain opposite. As at Chin-kiang the anchorage is bad here, the ground is rocky and the water deep and the river about three- fourths of a mile wide. Kew-kiang has, how- ever, not realised the expectations formed of it when Sir J. Hope's pony visited it; it is a market for green teas and a few blacks, but does not linger on in its demand for manufactured goods. Thence to Hankow we pass the ugli a rich, cultivated plain; at others, past the base of a high range of hills, some cultivated to the summit. Every here and there are dotted towns and villages, wedged in some times between two hills, with their numerous pagodas and battle- mented walls, and Buddhist monasteries perched on the brow of some lofty hill, and the small craft attached to each town some fishing, others, larger, moving, to all appearance, through paddy fields, and the people in a state of prosperity, the whole country bearing a marked contrast to the ruined cities, broken walls, and burnt joss houses of the rebel districts through which we passed.

Approach to Hankow, which is just four, before the rebels descended the river, was mark- ed by a forest of masts lining both sides of the Yang-tsze-kiang, here about a mile wide, is now discerned by the long and imposing range of Ningpo hongs and warehouses extending about half a mile above the river bank, and three- quarters of a mile below it, quite overtopping all the native houses in the vicinity, and affording a most refreshing prospect after coming so many hundred miles from the sea. The important city of Woo-Chang, the capital of the Hoo- Quang and seat of the Viceroy, is immediately opposite. There are now established at Hankow about 30 British firms, including all the leading names in Hongkong and Shanghai, three Amer- ican and three or four German and French houses, and one Russian hong. The most nux- tous care is now requisite to select a fitting an- chorage, which in the summer months is no easy matter; the strength of the current and the chow-chow water render a safe berth, where cargo may be landed and shipped, very difficult to find; lucky, indeed, is the vessel that escapes without loss of more than an anchor and cable, for broken windlasses and hawsepipes are among the disasters attending the anchorage opposite to Hankow. There is an abominable chow-chow water formed by the river Han, which empties itself into the Yang-tsze- kiang at right angles, the main current of the larger river sweeping it away, and form- ing those eddies many miles down. We found it prudent to moor with three anchors; one passed on shore to the bund made the ship comparatively easy, and the anchors should be sighted at least once a week, as they very soon get covered from the silt out of the Han and plant which grows very rapidly at the bottom. From information received from the captain of one of the gunboats the anchorage opposite Han- Yang appears to be the best; there the bank is more gradual and the water more shallow. Han- Yang is on the right bank of the Han river, a narrow stream of about 120 yards in width, and is preferred by some of the residents as being more healthy than Hankow; the land is higher, the air purer, not having to pass over a dense China town during the summer months; and, above all, the anchorage is safer. The French Consul has taken up his consulate here, and a suspensi- n bridge to connect the two towns has been projected, as a means of bringing into clo- ser connection the warehouses above the Han with the shops, lighters and hongs below. The present system of cargo boats is wretchedly bad; they are unwieldy, and propelled by a great scull oar, worked by ten or a dozen men, and when they get involved in the chow-chow water it is difficult to extricate themselves. One of these boats laying a steamer with about £3,000 worth of cash got foul of our bows and disappeared, drowning some of the men. This is a common occurrence. Unless the present anchorage opposite Hankow is changed for a better one, such as that off Han-Yang, where a ship may ride in safety, there will always be great risk in landing and in shipping goods at this port. There is every probability of sailing vessels taking away first teas in future, no less than four of large tonnage having sailed for England this season, and it is only reasonable that the Chinese authorities should facilitate as much as possible any measures which are calcu- lated to render the navigation or anchorages safer and more convenient for the receipt and despatch of cargo. The Lang-shan crossing is the only point of danger in the navigation from Woosung to Hankow, but, notwithstanding this, the voyage is not attended with greater risk than the navigation of the Hooghly at the present time.

The British concession at Hankow covers an area of about ninety acres. The allotments have the advantage over those at Hongkong of being held by titles direct from the British Government. From fifteen to twenty British hongs are now in course of erection, and the municipal council are engaged in bunding and in laying out roads. A large piece of land has been presented by the British Government for a church, the plans of which are before the com- munity, and a club-house has been contracted for; in short the most indifferent observer can- not be otherwise than impressed with the con- viction that Hankow is destined to become the Kiakhta of Central China, and the most impor- tant of any of our seats of commerce in that most interesting country.

ALEX. BOWERS, R.N.R.,
Master of the ship White Adder, belong- ing to Messrs. John Willis & Son.

The letter of Captain Bowers furnishes us with that precise information of the navi- gation and of Hankow itself which we much needed, for the local papers (as is only natural) assume that people here know all about it. We can assure our contemporaries that the letter of Captain Bowers and the leader in The Times have been quite the topic with China people in the city, and we hope shipmasters will more frequently favor us with their notes on the great Yangtsze. We shall be most happy to publish them. The Times, in drawing attention to this interest- ing letter, has the following leader:—

It will be wise to speculate but cautiously up- on recent news from China. The country is too big, and the influences which produce events there are too imperfectly known, to allow us to generalise at once with rapidity and certainty. The old Empire is like a great whale in the southern latitudes, struggling and splashing, and heaving under the simultaneous attacks of three or four thrasher-fish; and perhaps there are also whalers not far off armed with all the appliances dictated by human sagacity, and watching their opportunity to cut up the creature's blubber and hoist it on board their own European purposes. Under such circumstances we cannot judge from a distance what may be the especial strength of this or that blow from this or that thrasher-fish, or what may be the chances of this or that harpooner. We cannot tell from any single convulsive effort of the perplexed monster which of the thrasher-fish he most dreads, or whether his next effort will be to go right away down to the bottom, or to lash about him upon the surface, or to drive head-foremost at the nearest ship. Even if a European statesman were at this moment the adviser of the infant Emperor or the Regent Mother, he might, per- haps, be puzzled to know whether his most fatal foes were to be found among the Taipings, or whether he had not still more to dread from the American soldiers of fortune who pass from side to side as their interests seem to sway; or the French Consul, who is always pressing upon him costly and undesired assistance; or the British Government, which to an Oriental mind may easily appear capricious; or the expedi- tionary force of Commodore Osburn, which demands securities for its own preservation, and which imposes conditions for its own self-respect. It must be clear, even to Prince Kung, that of all the many friends who offer their swords to the Empire no one is actuated by pure and loyal love of the Imperial dynasty. The shrewd man- darins of Pekin can see that no one among these foreign allies cares anything either for the dynasty or for the Empire. We ought to bear with them, therefore, while they are trying to ascertain which of their friends has the most harmless object, and which is least hostile to the existence of the present Empire. One, at least of the Chinese advisers of the Empire is a shrewd and enlightened man, and, ultimately, the Court of Pekin will certainly see that England is the only European country which wants no Chinese territory, and that the British expeditionary force is the only force which, although it may be unable to strike in disguise, can never be prevented to change sides at the war. Whatever difficulties may have occurred at Pekin, nothing has happen- ed that has not been foreseen, and which is not necessarily incident to all Eastern Coun- cils. One fact is quite certain—that what ever delays may have been the ingenuity of the Go- vernment of Pekin to employ their newly arrived fleet to clear the Yang-tsze, and put down pira- cy, the wary leaders of that expedition would never have omitted themselves to any serious work until the hot season had passed, and the rivers and their banks became safe for Europe- ans. Under no circumstances could we have had any news of actual achievements. It will be time enough to listen to bad auguries when the season for action has come and no news of action arrives.

Meantime, although the Empire does not spring up in a moment into life and strength, as some would seem to expect, it is allowable to mark what strangely rapid changes are passing before our eyes in the social and commercial condition of the Chinese people. We invite the statesmen who took part in the Arrow and Sir John Bowring debates to compare the state of things which they had to "get up" for that great gladiatorial contest with the condition of affairs described by the plain seaman whose letter ap- pears in our columns to-day. To men of military experience in our political conflicts, it seems but as yesterday that eloquent leaders of parties were inveighing in our house of commons against the unreasonableness of English merchants who com- plained of being stoned from the walls of Canton, or of having their companions murdered during a walk just outside their factory. They will re- member how, even after the debates were over, we were almost besieged in our little island of refuge at Hongkong, our supplies were cut off, our Chinese servants called away from us, and a strong party in England was ready to declare there was nothing for it but to abandon the ports, reduce our treaty stations, and be content with the scanty remnants of commerce that might be made to flow again through the old lungs. This journal, which pertinaciously (not to say ob- stinately) persisted in pointing out the necessity to this country of a complete commercial inter- course with China, through the instrumentality of the great Yangtsze River, was asserted at as having believed itself to have discovered a new river in Asia. We were told that all that was known of it had been known for centuries; that it was a turbulent, erratic river of evil repute, always changing its course, and known more Nankin- only as a fabled and mythic stream wherein returned missionaries had vaguely placed cities of incredible proportions. Even the Geographi- cal Society would have been puzzled to tell at that short distance of time, from the Lettres Edifiantes and Du Halde and Semer us, whether anson contained eight millions and a- half of people or where it was, or whether it was, indeed, but an item of a congeries of cities; or, in fact, whether it existed except in the ima- ginations of the Jesuits. English optimism was, however, nearly unanimous on one point, and that was that the notion of shipping our teas direct from this mysterious and very doubtful place was about as wild a notion as ever came from a disimpanelled brain. This universal ignorance as to Hankow, and this perfect scepticism as to its existence, are not more than five years old. Well, now read the letter of Captain Bowers. Here is an Englishman who has just come down the Yang-tze from this very city of Hankow, in a British ship of a thousand tons, drawing nineteen feet six inches of water of tea. All the uncertainty, all the mystery, we may al- most say all the danger, has vanished from the doubted city of the Upper Yang-tze. We are not insisting upon this as a great naval achieve- ment. Our naval men in ships of war have done it before. But we draw attention to it as a simple commercial voyage now performed in the ordinary course of business. The voyage, we are told, is not attended with greater risk than that up and down the river by which we reach Calcutta. In this far-away city in the centre of China there is at this day a space of nearly seven thousand feet in front of the Hongs—we should call them palaces in Pall-mall—are rising; the residents are tracing out the lines of a church, and are approving plans of a club house; and "the Municipal Council" are engaged in laying out public works and in con- structing roads. There are some difficulties about the anchorage, but four ships of large ton- nage have sailed laden with teas this season, and it seems now that homeward our British ships will take up their cargoes of teas in the very emporium to which all the markets of China are but tributaries, and will bring them home, safe unbroken, to the Thames. It is less than five years; yet the river has been charged up, lit up, and thoroughly mapped with as accurate a survey as we have of the Mersey or the Medway; and as the great ships float swiftly down, laden with their precious freights, past the dreaded haunts of the Taipings, they ask for nothing but a fair protection from piracy to make the intercourse between the centre of China and the port of London direct and secure. Thus, in a period of time which is inappreciable in the life of nations, while the numbers of Bernard which round the old protests are yet unbound, we have a practi- cal refutation of all the prophecies which warn- ed us of the obstinate hatred of the Chinese peo- ple, and of their detestation of foreign trade.

We must not now plunge into figures, or we might go on to show how much in value has that trade become, and how vastly it is increasing month by month. Such, however, is not the moral we would draw from the simple statement which this officer of our commercial marine has put before us. We would only say that while matters are prospering so hugely, while we are so successfully invading this great territory of hundreds of millions by our merchants, our ships, our commerce, and our missionaries—the armies and sutlers of our christian civilisation—let us not be too impatient as to political occurren- ces, or too despondent as to the ultimate success of the little force now doing its peace service as well as civilisation for this people whom we so little understand. That China must in some, at least, of her provinces, very soon become rich and prosperous, and that we shall be partners in that prosperity, is now sufficiently apparent. In the end, prosperity and riches will exercise their own- selves; protection, and protection means a strong Government. It may be that our present efforts may be frustrated by the folly and imbecility of those we are desirous to assist. We do not augur that this will be so, but it may happen. In the end, however, we are convinced that our attentions and our acts will be appreciated by the Chinese people. Already the Chinaman has learned to ask, when about to intrust his goods to a ship, the important question, "Can insure?" It is but a short step forwards to make the still more im- portant inquiry of how he can insure his life, his property, and his home. He will be very soon convinced that for some time yet to come this can only be done by the maintenance of an effi- cient and regularly paid force upon whose honour and fidelity he can rely.

BENSON'S WATCHES AND CLOCKS.
WATCH AND CLOCK MAKER,
BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT, TO HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Opinions of the London Press upon Benson's Great Clock and Watches in the Exhibition, 1862.

"As a sample of English clock-work on a large scale, the works of this are probably the finest finished that have ever been seen in this country. No Chronometer could be fitted with more perfect or carefully-adjusted mechanism."—Times, June 11, 1862.
"A triumph of ingenuity."—Telegraph, March 31, 1862.
"A more splendid and exquisitely-finished piece of mechanism we have never seen."—Standard, June 17, 1862.
"Some of them are of great beauty; and if the English watch-trade only follow up with the same spirit and success this first attempt to compete with foreigners in decorative watches, there seems to be no reason why we should not get the trade entirely into our own hands."—Times, June 23, 1862.
"Ranged round the base of the clock were the Watches which Mr. Benson exhibited, and which have been universally admired for the beauty and elegance of the designs engraved upon them. The movements are of the finest quality which the art of horology is at present capable of producing. The clock and watches were objects of great attraction, and well repaid the trouble of an inspection."—Illustrated London News, November 8, 1862.

AT a Committee Meeting of the Shanghai General Chamber of Commerce the following resolution was put and carried unanimously.
RESOLUTION.
That in consequence of the numerous disputes arising from the arbitrary valuations placed upon different dollars of the Mexican currency by the Native Shroffs, the Committee of the Chamber is of opinion that after adequate Notice all undefaced Mexican Dollars of standard fine and weight should be accepted by foreign Firms in discharge of engagements to pay in that Currency, unless a specific agreement to the contrary should be stated in the Contract.
The Committee therefore give notice that in about a month from this date a general meeting of the Members of the Chamber will be held to take into consideration whether, and at what time, to give effect to the above Resolution.

Secretary.
